Airbnb

Dear Hiring Manager,

Dear Airbnb Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the iOS Engineer position on the Listings Clients team. The opportunity to build tools that help hosts create and manage their listings—directly impacting millions of hosts and guests worldwide—is exactly the kind of high-visibility, user-focused work I find most rewarding.

At Walmart, I've led iOS checkout development for one of the world's highest-volume eCommerce platforms. This work shares a lot of DNA with what the Listings team does: building intuitive interfaces that guide users through complex workflows, collaborating daily with product managers, designers, and backend engineers, and maintaining quality standards that keep millions of transactions running smoothly. I led our team in driving test coverage to 85% while maintaining 99.9%+ crash-free sessions—the kind of reliability that matters when users depend on your platform.

What draws me to Airbnb is the chance to build something that enables real human connection. Checkout flows serve a transaction; hosting tools empower people to share their homes and experiences with the world. That's a meaningful difference. My background includes extensive work with Swift, GraphQL API integration, and reactive architectures, along with independent consulting where I've built apps across healthcare, education, and consumer industries. That variety has sharpened my product sense—I've learned to deeply understand what users actually need, not just what they ask for.

I'm excited about contributing to a team focused on delighting hosts with beautiful, intuitive tools. Thank you for considering my application.

Best regards,

Douglas W. Sjoquist
